

Jadelyn Stanfill, Young Children's Division Instructor

Jadelyn's journey in dance began at a young age while living in Spain where she first fell in love with ballet. After her family relocated to Texas she continued to train in various genres beyond ballet such as pointe, jazz, contemporary, modern, character and hip hop. Jadelyn was highly trained at a Cuban ballet school in San Antonio, Texas where she competed at the international student level across a wide range of categories and genres. Her experiences in the competitive arena have fostered a deep understanding of the art form, honing her skills and shaping her perspective as an instructor. One of the most memorable moments in Jadelyn's career was receiving an invitation to showcase American ballet in Cuba. This incredible opportunity allowed her to represent her country and captivate audiences with her grace and artistry. It was a humbling experience that further fueled her passion for ballet and instilled in her a commitment to sharing its beauty on a global scale.

As an instructor, Jadelyn's primary objective is to inspire and nurture her students' love for dance. She firmly believes in cultivating a supportive and inclusive environment where each student feels empowered to explore their potential and express themselves through movement. Jadelyn feels immensely privileged to be part of the vibrant community of artists and dancers at Ballet Austin. Guiding aspiring dancers on their transformative journeys is an honor she cherishes deeply. With her guidance, passion, and expertise, she aims to inspire the next generation of dancers, fostering their self-discovery, artistry, and boundless potential through the universal language of dance.
